(c) The names of units engaged in the production of nitrogenous and phosphatic fertilizers are given in the Annexure attached. [See Appendix CLIII, Annexure No. 47]

(d) The main purpose of the retention price and subsidy scheme is to make fertilizers available at reasonable prices to the farmers in order to encourage agricultural producion, to maintain reasonable ratio between the prices of fertilizers and of goodgrains, to protect the interests of the indigenous manufacturers by assuring them a reasonable return on their investment, to induce manufacture of fertilizers in the country and thereby to reduce de pendence on imports and consequently, outgo of foreign exchange. As far as possible, the retention price and subsidy scheme has been structured to prevent misuse.

(e) to (F) In November, 1989, Planning Commission constituted an Expert Group under the Chairmanship of Shri B. B. Singh, Member, Appellate Authority for BIFR to go into the entire gamut of fertilizer subsidy, pricing etc.

(g) and (h) With a view to reducing the subsidy burden, higher norms of capacity utilisation and longer period of depreciation were notified with effect from 1. 4. 1988.
